

Pride

Andromeda's Steve Bacic takes some time out from saving the Universe to talk about his role as one of the new bad guys on Stargate SG-1.

back an actor or actress unless he or she is going to reprise their same role," notes Bacic. "I was lucky, though, because Stuart Aikins [casting director] is working on the show this season. He cast Andromeda as well as The Colt, a TV movie I did a few months ago. Also, Stargate's Martin Wood directed our Season Four finale on Andromeda. So I asked my agent to keep an eye out for any parts coming up on Stargate. My thinking was that if the character was a military officer I might be able to persuade them to call him Coburn.

"I ended up auditioning for the part of Camulus, and that went quite well. After I finished, [director] Andy Mikita and I talked about what the concerns were with my having been on the show before. He seemed to think it wouldn't be a problem because it was such a long time ago. Just in case, though, he also had me read for the role of a colonel who's an officer onboard a ship [the Prometheus] that's the first and last line of defence against an alien invasion of Earth. Things went

Left: Steve Bacic in Stargate SG-1
Right: ...as Telemachus in Andromeda

